

the art of street

How do we assume our personality? Do we try a couple of them and see what fits, do we explore within and find out who we are? Or we just pay attention to what we monkey and what's our own, maybe try and hold on to it? These gray areas. These transitions. Streetwear taps right into these sweet spots and schools us over the joy in seeking no answers.

Sometimes, what is deemed cool and what one finds cool doesn't overlap. Streetwear might not burn that gap as much as it bridges it. Guess that's why it's more than a trend, Street's a culture. And tee's are the comfiest segue into it. Here are some cult populars to headstart your tee game.

MIDNIGHT LAW

One cannot talk about street fashion without addressing the 80s&90s- The mafia of pop culture. Started during the vintage fashion boom, Midnight Law gloats of an indulging range from 80s punk to vaporwave, japan street and extremely nostalgic comic collections. Oh and the sinfully affordable price range only doubles the rush.

ORIGIN

Origin is another homegrown label that pushes self-expression through fashion. With a heavy influence of pop culture and Greek glitch, it sure is a pick of the litter. We find it caters to your basic, casual needs, like that tee perfect for Sunday afternoons that you somehow end up wearing to a standup show.

SCHOOL

School does its business exclusively through Instagram. Yeah it's cool like that. It's an underdog we found to be an interesting mention. The first collection 'hustleforlakshmi' is a refreshing take on fusion tees, almost startling really. After all, when it comes to counterculture aren't local the most vocal.

Pair them with a sheer turtle neck, your oversized tommy shirt or a tattoo sleeve, these t-shirts are an entire vibe. Well, we all know tattoo sleeves are dead.
